

Policy Statement on the Human Rights Strategy of the Oetker Group

Social and environmental responsibility of the Oetker Group

The Oetker Group is active nationally and internationally with nearly 30,000 employees in over 40 countries with production, sales, and service companies. As a family-owned company with more than 130 years of tradition, it has always been aware of its responsibility not only towards its own employees, but also towards society as a whole and the environment. This concerns in particular also the respect of human rights.

We are aware that our business activities could have negative impact on the environment or human rights. That is why we always strive to procure our materials and services in a sustainable manner and monitor the social standards in our supply chains.

In order to meet a growing responsibility in times of a globalized economy also in the future, we as the Oetker Group are committed to the Human Rights Strategy set out in this Policy Statement. The management of Dr. August Oetker KG and the management of all group companies are equally responsible for its implementation.

Scope

This Policy Statement¹ applies to all companies and business units of the Oetker Group and their employees and is implemented in all companies and business units of the Oetker Group. All group companies are obliged to observe these principles and to integrate them into their daily business processes.

Our basic principles

Our aim is to establish and implement human rights and environmental due diligence obligations in our own business units and in our supply chains. In doing so, we are guided in particular by the German Supply Chain Due Diligence Act and the internationally recognized human rights and environmental standards listed therein.

The Oetker Group always respects applicable national law. In the event of a conflict between international human rights principles and applicable national regulations, the Oetker Group always strives to comply with international human rights principles as far as possible.

¹ The policy statement will be revised, if necessary, annually and on an ad-hoc basis and published in its current version on the Oetker Group Homepage at Supply Chain Due Diligence Act | Oetker Group.

Our expectations

The internationally recognized human rights and environmental standards are in line with our values and are reflected in our own guidelines.

With our Oetker Code of Business Conduct, we oblige all employees worldwide to behave in an honest and lawful manner towards colleagues, business partners and suppliers and to uphold human rights and environmental standards.

In our Oetker Supplier Code of Conduct, we define our expectations towards our business partners and suppliers that they are also committed to respect human rights and implementing appropriate human rights and environmental due diligence obligations. In our understanding, this also means that our business partners have to ensure that their own suppliers also comply with these requirements.

Our management process

We consider actual and potential violations of the aforementioned standards to be a risk to our companies. In the course of risk mitigation, we therefore want to prevent such violations from the outset; otherwise, our efforts will be aimed at ending the violation or at least minimizing its negative effects.

For the performance of and compliance with all human rights and environmental due diligence obligations, the Oetker Group has therefore defined a groupwide applicable risk management system, which is described in the internal Guideline on implementing Human Rights and Environmental Due Diligence Obligations under the Supply Chain Due Diligence Act (SCDDA) and implemented in all group companies.

The guideline defines responsibilities and procedures for the implementation of the legally defined due diligence obligations as follows:

Responsibilities

Responsibility for the methodology used in the risk management process bears the Human Rights Committee at the level of Dr. August Oetker KG, which is made up of representatives of the management teams from the relevant group companies as well as the Human Rights Officers appointed in the group companies concerned.

Activities that arise in the course of the operational implementation of human rights and environmental due diligence processes can be delegated to a human rights management team set up in each group company. This provides the personnel resources for risk management and reports regularly and on an ad-hoc basis on incidents and results of its efforts.

The Human Rights Coordinators appointed in the group companies are responsible for monitoring compliance with due diligence obligations. This ensures a smooth flow of information to the Human Rights Committee.

These responsibilities in risk management ensure that our Human Rights Strategy outlined in this Policy Statement is anchored in all relevant business processes in the group companies.

Our risk management process includes the following elements, among others:

Risk analysis

Risk analysis is the core element of our risk management process. Its aim is to identify human rights or environmental risks and the impact of our business activities on people along our supply chain. It serves to identify relevant human rights and environmental risk areas, including potentially affected people in our own business units, at our direct suppliers and, in the case of substantiated knowledge, also at indirect suppliers. This allows us to take actions where necessary, which are then subject to an effectiveness test.

Direct suppliers undergo an initial assessment based on country and industry using a digital risk analysis tool. If necessary, this is followed by an in-depth detailed analysis to identify the risks more precisely. If there is substantiated evidence of a violation on the part of indirect suppliers, they are included into the risk management process to the extent possible, in the same manner as direct suppliers.

Within our own business unit as well, (potential) risks are identified and assessed based on their extent, scope, and remedy, as well as their likelihood of occurrence.

Definition and implementation of preventive measures

Preventive measures are defined and implemented both for the company's own business units and for direct suppliers and, in the case of substantiated knowledge, for indirect suppliers.

Regardless of the level of risk, standard preventive measures are taken; in our own business unit, this includes the communication of this Policy Statement, the announcement of the Oetker Code of Business

Conduct and training on our human rights and environmental due diligence obligations. For suppliers, it includes the agreement of the Oetker Supplier Code of Conduct.

If, as part of the risk analysis, a company of the Oetker Group identifies a need for action in its own business unit or at its suppliers, it immediately takes appropriate preventive measures.

To prevent the Oetker Group from contributing risks or violations at its direct suppliers through its own procurement behaviour, central guidelines for the consideration of human rights and environmental risks have also been defined for the procurement strategies of all group companies:

- Efforts are made to ensure that all direct suppliers accept the Oetker Supplier Code of Conduct as part of the contract.
- In addition to the factors price and quality, human rights and environmental risks are taken into account in the selection of suppliers.
- When concluding and during the term of the contract, it must be ensured that pricing and delivery times enable the supplier to warrant human rights and environmental requirements. Adequate wages as well as minimum and collectively agreed wages must be included. This may also require upward price adjustments in the event of wage increases.
- In all cases, the engagement of a high-risk supplier requires the approval of the Human Rights Coordinator.

Derivation and implementation of remedial measures

If a group company discovers that a human rights or environmental violation has occurred or is imminent in its own business unit or at a supplier, remedial action is taken immediately. The choice of measures to be carried out is made on a case-by-case basis, depending on the nature of violation.

A violation in the own business unit must be rectified immediately. To this end, remedial measures are agreed together with the originator and monitored for their effectiveness. If a remedy cannot be achieved directly and effectively, further measures shall be agreed until the violation has been remedied.

Every company of the Oetker Group does its best efforts to remedy violations of a human rights or environmental obligation by its direct suppliers and also by its indirect suppliers, where it has substantiated knowledge of such a violation. If this is not directly possible, a concept to end or minimize the violation will be developed without delay, including a concrete plan for the implementation of the agreed measures. If, however, it is still not possible to remedy the situation effectively, further measures will be agreed until the violation has been remedied or at least been minimized. If it is, despite everything, not possible to bring the violation to an effective end, the Oetker Group will endeavor to find a remedy together with other companies (e.g. through industry initiatives).

Complaint procedure

The Oetker Group has set up an appropriate and effective complaints procedure, which makes publicly accessible and confidential reporting channels available to all groups of persons and organizations. It allows at any time to report, by name or anonymously, on human rights and environmental risks as well as violations of human rights-related or environmental obligations caused by the economic activities of the Oetker Group or a supplier of the Oetker Group. Details of the complaints procedure, which can also be used to provide information on other types of misconduct and/or violations of applicable legal regulations (e.g. money laundering, bribery, data protection) and internal guidelines, can be viewed at Compliance | Oetker Group. Here, the language access channels, information on confidentiality and impartiality during the processing of information as well as on the protection of the whistleblower, can also be found.

Effectiveness checks

The Oetker Group monitors the risk management system through annual and ad-hoc based effectiveness checks in three stages – the so-called 1st, 2nd and 3rd Line:

- In the 1st Line, the effectiveness of the respective measures is checked.
- In the 2nd Line, the Human Rights Coordinator and other designated monitoring persons ensure the effectiveness of the risk assessment, prevention and remediation processes through random checks.
- In the 3rd Line the company's internal department Corporate Audit / Compliance / Consulting monitors the 1st and 2nd Lines as part of its general responsibilities.

Our main areas of risk

As a basis for assessing and prioritizing the risks for its own business units as well as for its direct suppliers, Dr. August Oetker KG carried out annual and ad-hoc risk analyses, which led to the following findings:

- The potential for human rights and environment-related risks for the company's own business units can generally be classified as low. Production companies and companies in the transport and logistics sector are generally characterized by an increased occupational safety risk.
- In the case of direct suppliers – in view of their global structure – the highest risk potentials are to be found in the food sector, and here due to basic country risks, especially with direct suppliers in non-European countries.

From an industry perspective, increased risks can be identified in the food & beverage, agricultural commodities, construction, and transport & logistics sectors, with a tendency toward heightened risks in the categories of occupational safety and forced labor.

In fulfilling our due diligence obligations, we base our actions on the need for intervention arising from the risk areas identified for each supplier. Here, we proceed step-by-step according to the criticality of the risk.

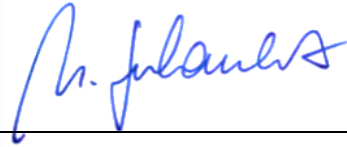

Documentation and Reporting

Compliance with all due diligence obligations is continuously documented by the Oetker Group and kept in an audit-proof manner for at least seven years.
